This is the Roosevelt Story.

This is a story we are proud to tell, one without pretense, dogma, or prejudice. This is a story of the courage, imagination, vision, and daring that created a monument in human relations.

What was once considered impossible is now bold, vigorous reality. In an atmosphere of free and creative thinking, exist the competing points of view, however controversial, which have gone into making America great . . . all the potentials capable of improving our society . . . all the requirements for making the American Dream an actuality.

This yearbook does more than set down a mere pictorial record. We have represented here, as sincerely and skillfully as we could, the dream, the growth, and the final reality of this school. We think that as you leaf through these pages you will feel an upsurge of pride in this institution where all kinds of people, black and white people, yellow and brown people, can join in the fellowship and cooperation befitting brothers under the skin, where all kinds of men seek the truth that they may be free.

THE STAFF

1882 - Franklin D. Roosevelt - 1945

I

AM HAPPY to have the opportunity to salute Roosevelt College of Chicago on the occasion of the publication of the first yearbook in its three year history.

During the short period of its existence, Roosevelt College of Chicago has built a reputation for leadership not only in the scholastic field, but also in the much more important field of human relations. The policy of the school in maintaining no quota systems against any minority, race, or religion, has stamped it as an institution which is striving to carry out the highest ideals of a true democracy. The participation of students with the faculty in the college's operation is worthy of high commendation.

Your college bears the name of Roosevelt. Because Franklin Delano Roosevelt advocated and fought throughout his life for a truly free and democratic America, in which all citizens regardless of what race or creed they came from would have equal opportunity in this land of ours, the name of Roosevelt will always be identified with the struggle for true democratic principles.

It is hoped that Roosevelt College of Chicago will continue throughout the years to practice the liberal ideals which my father fought for and thus continue the Roosevelt tradition.

ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT

TARINI P. SINHA

Born in India . . . educated at the Hindu University, Benares . . . the University of London . . . Graduate Institute of International Studies, Geneva . . . Michigan . . . Chicago . . . personal friend of Gandhi, of Tagore, A. Fenner Brockway . . . officer, Opium Section, Secretariat, League of Nations . . . Manchester Guardian . . . British Independent Labour Party . . . teacher of economics and political science at Roosevelt College . . . died of a cerebral hemorrhage December 2, 1946, while teaching a class.

These are official reasons for remembering him. These are titles to orient those of our friends who never met Mr. Sinha.

But it is not to Tarini P. Sinha's memory that we make this dedication. His unique faculty for involving himself with each of our lives makes it impossible for us to separate the when he was alive from the when he was dead.

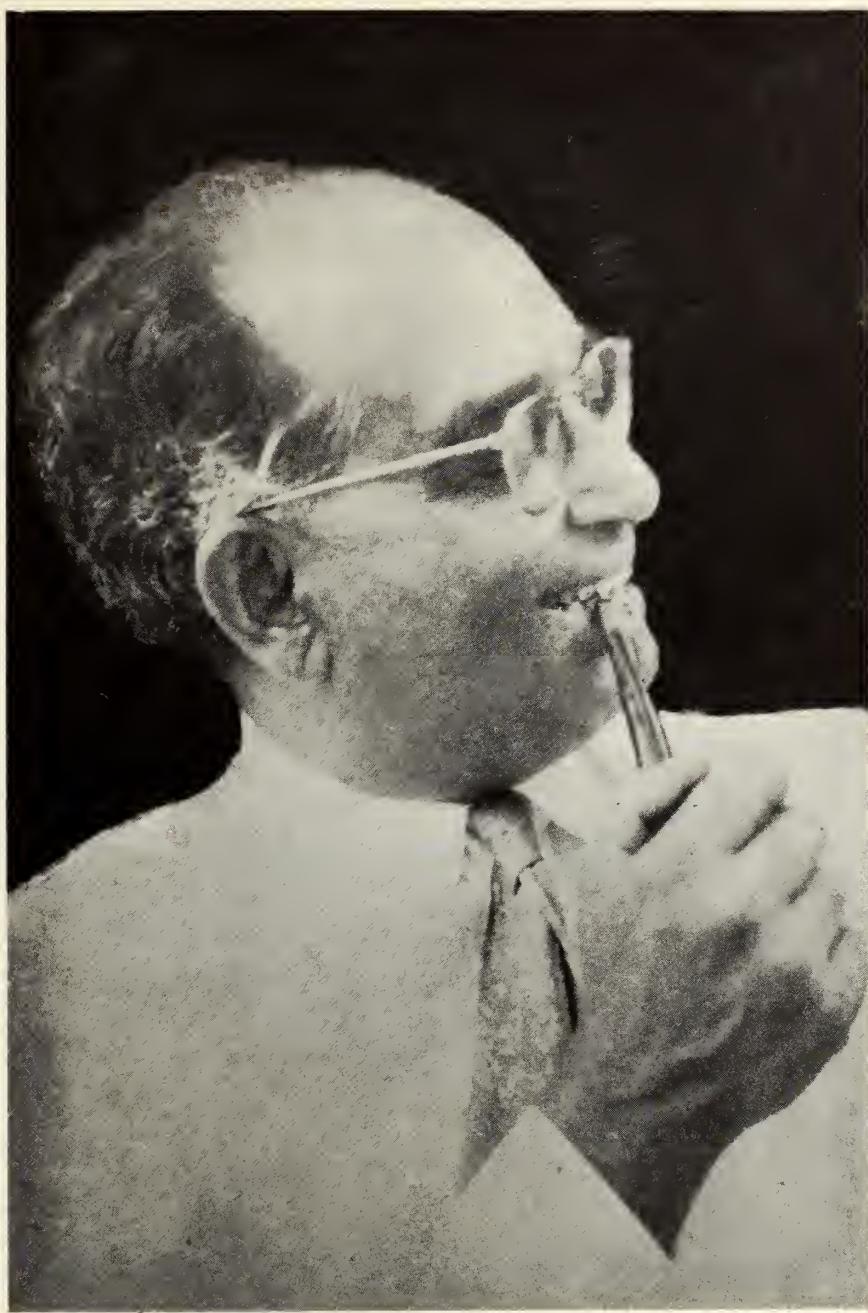

We still expect him to encounter us accidentally in the corridor just at the moment when we reluctantly admit to ourselves that we cannot afford supper. He has something to talk about, he says, and would we do him the honor. And he always knows which ones we are.

Or watch him try to hide his sheepishness as he confesses that last night he soothed a lady whose son was killed in Germany by telling her of the glories for which her son died.

Hear him forcefully denounce injustice.

When we introduced him as one of our favorite teachers he merely said, with that accent which knows many languages but remains devoted to the mother tongue, "I wish you would have said, 'This is Mr. Sinha, one of my dearest friends'."

T

HE PUBLICATION of the first Roosevelt College annual is a significant event. In it posterity will find the pictures, the names, and the activities of many of the students whose faith—no less than ours—made possible the historic founding of Roosevelt College.

I like to think that future student generations will turn to this book with pride and say: “These men and women believed in a principle and made it work.”

Our graduates are living proof that the pioneering spirit is not dead in America; they prove that equality of opportunity is still a vital ideal; they proclaim the inalienable human right to achieve according to one's ability; they are witnesses of the democratic principle that people can bind themselves together by ideas instead of by the interests of social class, creed, or color.

To you graduates: Best of luck! Your splendid effort for attainment of these ideals has only begun. That is the meaning of your “commencement.” Chicago and our nation needs your community leadership. World citizenship—though its form is at present overshadowed by international strife—is not beyond your grasp. To the things you believe in has now been added definite skills and certain intellectual tools. The history of your college—measured in years—is brief, but you are the heirs of a long and noble moral and intellectual tradition.

It is the tradition of Franklin Roosevelt, Thomas Jefferson, and many others who have given America an unshakeable belief in man's ability to do something about the problems of war and his own social environment; it is the tradition of expanding human freedom—everywhere in the world; it is the tradition which calls for ennoblement of the status of the individual.

EDWARD J. SPARLING

WAYNE A. R. LEYS

Dean of Faculties

The Class of 1948 has not only gone to college — the members of this class have helped to create a college. The building of a scholarly community is the focussing of the universe in a single place.

Thus, some of you have helped establish the study of Chemistry on the fifth floor of the Auditorium Building, the cultivation of arts and crafts on the fourth floor, the inauguration of mathematical, ethical, business, sociological, linguistic, and other studies on other floors.

You have noted the new insights that were added to the college community when an anthropologist joined the staff, when bacteriologists were recruited, when musicians came to us from hither and yon. You cooperated with specialists and amateurs in activities outside of the classroom.

I congratulate you upon your graduation from a new school. I predict that you will be rewarded by the achievement of creative will and know-how many years prior to the time of life when creativity is normally possible. Unfortunately, the necessary disciplines of education usually have a deadening effect upon the imagination of young people. I expect an unusually large part of the class of 1948 to have both skill and the divine fire.

WAYNE A. R. LEYS

Big Jim and Little Nick

—Our President and Director of Activities, strike a pose for the photographers as they survey our Grant Park "campus" facilities.

Activities Office Staff

G. Nick Paster and his staff efficiently provide for the recreation of Roosevelt College students in quarters overlooking Boul Mich. Shown below are Miss Noma Jensen, Paster, Edwin Turner, assistant director, Miss Lorraine Shore and Miss Shirley Goldberg.

Commerce Club

Full-time commerce students who seek specific information about the business field and part-time students who want advice on their present occupations are served by the Commerce Club activities. Included in the club's program is an orientation week for beginning commerce students, lectures by members of the faculty, field trips to business firms in the area, and with the intent of broadening its scope, participation in both college and national issues throughout the year.

International Relations

Spurred by a natural interest in global humanitarianism and the crisis in world affairs, Roosevelt College students have organized the International Relations Club. IRC believes in the principles of the United Nations and promotes the one-world idea through forums, seminars, and correspondence with students in other countries.

Catholic Club

Prominent Catholic laymen, speaking on contemporary moral and social problems from the viewpoint of catholicism, support the goals of the Catholic Club which was organized to extend the sphere of religion to practical, every-day problems.

Communist Club

In order that the doctrines of communism be furthered, the Communist Club has geared its program around many lively, timely discussions and lectures.

Wallace for President Club—

Sparked by a paid up membership of 380 members, the Wallace for President Club is easily the largest organization on campus. The club advances the candidacy of Henry Wallace in the New Party and through lectures, debates, and informal discussions airs political issues of the day.

Athletic Club—

Efforts to furnish the college with a competitive sports program are centered in activities of the Athletic Club. Until such time as a full scale athletic schedule is formed, the club participates in intra-mural sports.

Photography Club

The Roosevelt College Photography Club is composed of student talent which studies the art, maintains its own darkroom, and contributes to the campus publications. Many of its members are professionals.

American Society for Public Administration

Governed by a council composed of students and faculty, the American Society for Public Administration has access to the timeliest information on the science, processes, and art of public administration. This information is shared with members through lectures by prominent government officials.

Through the medium of lectures and study groups, the Intercollegiate Zionist Federation of America interprets the activities and recruits support for the projects of world Zionism. Since 1945, the Roosevelt chapter has stressed education, fund raising and political action in its activities with a side emphasis on social events.

League of Women Voters

Functioning as a non-partisan organization, the League of Women Voters endeavors to act as a liaison agent between students and representatives in the student government. The qualifications of Council candidates and the facts on important school issues, as well as information on general elections, are disseminated to the student body through pamphlets, debates, and question - and - answer periods.

Gamma Alpha Chi

Gamma Alpha Chi, national advertising sorority for women, serves feminine advertising students by keeping them informed of rapidly changing trends in the field, acquainting them with the work of other chapters throughout the country, and acting as a lead to future employment in all areas from research to copywriting.

Alpha Delta Sigma

With formation of the George D. Gaw chapter of Alpha Delta Sigma, national advertising fraternity for men, the college's advertising students were given the opportunity to associate with and learn from men prominent in the profession. Emphasis of this year's activities has been on color research, discussed both by guest speakers and round-table groups of the fraternity.

Delta Chi Alpha—

Both the social and serious affairs of Delta Chi Alpha, founded in protest of the characteristics of many college fraternities, are conducted with a basic ideal of democracy. At present a local organization, the group is working with other democratic fraternities throughout the country for the formation of a national fraternity.

Omega Psi Chi—

To promote the interest of psychology majors who expect to become professionals, Omega Psi Chi maintains outside contacts to keep abreast of current developments in the field.

Dance Committee—

Successes piled up by the annual Cranberry Hop, the President's Birthday Ball, and the Final Fling result from the promotional genius of the Dance Committee. The committee is named each year by the director of student activities.

American Veterans Committee—

Because the American Veterans Committee subscribes to the foundation principles of Roosevelt College GI students early formed a unit here. AVC boasts an energetic and forceful membership.

On Stage...

Richard Flaharty, business manager, reports to executive board of the Roosevelt College Theatre on the sensational successes of the past season. ### Proud as Punch

Theatre members take to the air to shout the glories of their first musical with original book and score.

American Youth for Democracy

American Youth for Democracy has for many semesters energetically promoted liberal, progressive ideas.

Students for Democratic Action

Students for Democratic Action aims to provide a medium and a program for uniting students in the promotion of local, national, and international student welfare. Such issues as the extension of educational opportunity and the progressive objectives of labor unions and farm organizations receive the SDA's support.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Student Government Leaders

Council members reflect the seriousness of their responsibilities for the cameraman. Front are Dick De Wolfe, Seymour Sudman, Phyllis Rappin, recording secretary, Alex Wilde, treasurer, Raymond Clevenger, president, Harold Washington, vice-president Harriett Fishman, Leslie Stone, and Charlotte Grossman. Rear, Bernard Jaffe, Robert Fine, Marshall Duckstein, Winston Kennedy, Charles Lupu, Sherwin Willens, Everette Hedrick, Nate Gaynor, Sheldon Pearlman, Raymond Trotter.

Democracy at Work

Sessions of the council are lively and well attended. Here an important issue is solved in a friendly spirit of cooperation.

Center of Power

Officers of the Student Council win their places through popular elections. This year's leaders are Marlyn Hirsh, recording secretary, Phyllis Rappin, corresponding secretary; and rear, Harold Washington, vice-president, and Raymond Clevenger, president.

Committee Caucus

Since the real work is done in committee, there are several in the Roosevelt College Student Council. One of the standing type is shown in action.

Strong Muscles Build Strong Minds

At Roosevelt College recreational needs of students are not neglected although the emphasis is upon scholarship. Football, gymnastics, and golf are only a part of the varied athletic program which strives toward body building and good health rather than commercialized competitive sports.

Undecided

Tommy Atkins (with the l-o-u-d trunks) can't make up his mind whether to play ball or be a prize fighter.

There Shall be Music...

Concerto in Concert

Under the capable direction of Florian Mueller, the Roosevelt College Music School Orchestra has gained a city-wide audience and reputation. Sectional rehearsals are conducted by members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra on the college staff, and players are students who qualify through auditions for chairs.

In addition to the orchestra, the Music School also features a band, chorus, ensemble, and folk dancing.

Rehearsal in Tempo

Practice sessions for the band are often inspired, musicians professionally able.

Credo for Alumni

JAMES B. DIAL

James B. Dial, distinguished alumnus of Roosevelt College, speaks out with force and sincerity about an issue of great moment.

Mr. Dial, an associate physicist at the Monsanto Chemical Laboratory, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, contributed his research during World War II toward development of the atomic bomb. His concern over its future compels him to preach the doctrine of peace, goodwill, and brotherhood among all men.

After receiving the B.S. degree in physics-chemistry from Central YMCA College in 1944, Mr. Dial won a B.S. in physics from the University of Tennessee. He is now completing studies for the Ph. D. degree in physics at that institution.

"Credo" once meant "I believe" to the people of a flourishing republic. The Roman Republic, with no shadow of danger visible from without, collapsed into tyranny after its citizens had abused and betrayed their high privilege of citizenship.

Once again we believe, but that is but a beginning. In a world of man-made forces of frightful violence, the exercise of citizenship has extended meaning.

It has the old meaning of the privilege of participating in political life, and the new meaning of chipping away all the time at the barriers which keep us from bending the new forces to the building of a better world for all.

We can put the Genii from our lamp to work, or loose him unguided upon the world and upon ourselves.

At Roosevelt College (and we "adopted" alumni at Central YMCA College) we have disagreed on how to build a free nation in a free world of people free to develop, each in his own way, their own synthesis of personality and action. Now we shall find ourselves among people who may not even admit such a nation in such a world is even to be desired, whatever the methods used to attain it.

This is our task: not only to believe, but to fight! Not only the glamorous fight: the speaker's stand at the rally, the parade, the affirmation of faith where it is accepted already, but also the slow, dragging, miserable fight—the endless steps and doorways and doorbells of getting out the vote, the ruthless grinding away of one's own prejudices and blind spots, the resistance to stereotype and label, the return to the ring again and again after defeat, the continuous search for facts upon which to build judgment.

Ever ready for the swift advance, we must not lose the chance to gain each instant's dogged inch!

Why YOU SHOULD CONTRIBUTE . . .

By RAYMOND CLEVENGER
President, Roosevelt Student Council

One of the most searching questions that can be asked of an institution is, "Who gains most from it?" When asked of Roosevelt College, this may not have an obvious answer.

For here it appears that the faculty, with its vigorous voice in college policy making, with its right to teach freely, reaps the fullest advantage of Roosevelt College.

The most perfect harvest the college yields, however, is gathered by the student. It is he, though extremely capable of college work but sometimes not welcomed by other schools because of race or religion, who finds in Roosevelt College the realization of his visions, his dreams. Here he finds the opportunity of receiving an education in liberalism, equaled in few other places.

Here he finds greater awareness of contemporary society. Intelligent awareness is a necessary means of meeting today's problems.

The opportunities offered to faculty and students mean nothing unless the individual develops and shapes them for himself. It is for us, citizens of the college, to preserve these opportunities that others in the future may benefit from them.

Those who gain most from Roosevelt College are those within the college who not only take advantage of its offered opportunities but who also serve in some way to perpetuate the school for students of the future.

We need not tax our mental resources to discover what each of us can do to insure this college's future.

Roosevelt College, our college is embarking on a campaign for three million dollars. If our school is to continue its growth, it is up to each one in the college to give his aid. Our task today is to develop Roosevelt College so that there can be students here in the future.

This campaign is a challenge! But the founding of our school was a challenge also. Just as some said that the ideals of Roosevelt College were impossible, so too they have said that our future is impossible.

The decision rests with us! The potential for success is within each of us!

In the spotlight
